TELEPHONE NIGHT STAGED

C. & P. Company Entertain Calvary Class With Novel Program.

More than 400 members of the Calvary class of the Calvary Baptist Sunday school were guests of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company Wednesday night at the church, 8th and H streets, when for the first time in Washington the concern staged what is known as "Telephone night."

The history of the utility from the first stammering contrivance evolved in a dusty machine shop at Salem, Mass., in 1876, by Alexander Graham Bell, down to the recent opening of the Key West-Havana submarine cable and the attendant conduct of a 5,000-mile telephone conversation between Cuba and Catalina Islands, Calif., was recounted by J. O. Martin, editor of the Transmitter, the company magazine. Stereophone pictures accompanied the narration.

Community singing, led by Percy S. Foster, interspersed the several numbers on the program, which included the exhibition of two moving picture films, "Number, Please" and "Speaking the Spoken Word." The evening was concluded with refreshments, served with telephone novelties.
